America Advised Not To Weaken With Victory In Plain Sight

(Editors: The following interview with Admiral William F. Halsey was filed via navy radio direct from a warship attached to the United States Third Fleet somewhere in the Western Pacific. This dispatch marks the first time that a news story has been transmitted from the battle fleet in a combat zone.)

ABOARD ADMIRAL HALSEY'S FLAGSHIP IN THE WESTERN PACIFIC, Nov. 11—(DELAYED)—(VIA NAVY RADIO)—Admiral William F. Halsey, fighting commander of the mighty United States Third Fleet, today laid down a blunt warning to the American people of the imminent danger of "phony" peace feelers from Japan in the face of an enemy announcement indicating the general trend of thought of the men of this vessel.

Referring to the statement in the paper, Halsey, in fighting form, said: "The high-up monkey men know this. The handwriting is on the wall."

The four-starred commander of this mighty battle fleet that recently wrecked the main portion of the Japanese imperial fleet in the most furious air-sea engagement of the war, aired his views on the present state of the Japanese military mind before a group of war correspondents in his cabin aboard this flagship.

TOKYO SLAPS BACK AT RUSSIA AS AGGRESSOR

NEW YORK, Nov. 13—Japan today slapped back at Russia in a "you're-one-too" name-calling contest, branding the Soviet Union as an "aggressor nation," just as Marshal Stalin several days ago referred to Japan.

In a broadcast entitled "What Is The Aggressor?" Radio Tokyo charged that "all western nations—Britain, America, France, the Netherlands, Portugal, Spain and Russia—were guilty of aggression in the most heartless form two or three centuries ago" and that in war ranks among the "flagrant cases" of aggression.

The Tokyo broadcast was regarded as Japan's first stern—even if somewhat oblique—answer to Marshal Stalin.

DERBY MAN HELD IN AUTO DEATH

Dewey Snyder Accused Of Responsibility In Hit-Skip Mishap

Dewey Snyder, of near Derby, was held in Pickaway county jail Monday, accused of being the driver of the car which struck and fatally injured John Buzzard, 70, Columbus, early Saturday.

Snyder was arrested in Mt. Sterling Saturday night by John Stage, Derby constable. Snyder at first denied being in the vicinity of the accident, but admitted Sunday his car struck Buzzard, Deputy Sheriff Vern Pontious reported.

Buzzard died Monday morning in Mt. Carmel hospital, where he was taken Saturday morning after he had been found lying in the road in Derby. Deputy Pontious said he suffered a double skull fracture and other injuries.

The accident apparently happened about 2 a. m. Saturday and Mr. Buzzard was found about 5:45 a. m. by a bread truck driver.

Snyder was arrested after Constable Stage had spotted a car which he believed was the car involved in the accident. It answered a general description given by a man who was near the scene of the accident and it showed evidence of having been in an accident.

He called Deputy Pontious who had found a headlight lens near where Buzzard was found. The rim fitted the car and marks on the car indicated it was the proper one.

Snyder was brought to jail here Sunday morning. Highway Patrolman K. L. Duling, Columbus, who investigated the accident with Deputy Pontious was called and he also expressed the opinion Snyder's car was the one sought. When presented with the officers' (Continued on Page Two)

HORSE WHIPS AUTO; INJURES STOUTSVILLE MAN

Donald Reisinger, Stoutsville, suffered cuts and bruises about the face Monday about 7 a. m. when his car and a horse were involved in an accident on the Stoutsville road about 2.3 miles from Circleville, Deputy Vern Pontious reported.

Reisinger was driving to work at Eshelman's mill when he saw the horse in the road. The horse reared and his front feet came down on the car breaking the windshield and damaging the top, hood and fender, Deputy Pontious said. The horse, which had got loose from the Bochard farm, received only scratches.

Dr. V. D. Kerns treated Reisinger at Berger hospital for a cut on his forehead and scratches on his face. Reisinger drove his car into Circleville after the accident and was taken to the hospital by police. He was dismissed from the hospital after receiving treatment.

MYSTERY FOGS WHEREABOUTS OF ADOLF HITLER

Second Proclamation Of Fuehrer In Month Read By Subordinate

NOT SEEN SINCE JULY

London Papers Believe Reich Being Prepared For Death News

LONDON, Nov. 13—Deep mystery shrouded the whereabouts of Adolf Hitler following delivery of a gloomy war proclamation, allegedly his own, but read by Heinrich Himmler. A wave of rumors concerning the Reich fuehrer's fate swept Germany as well as Allied nations.

The proclamation was issued for the main purpose of combatting the spreading belief that something had happened to Hitler. There was nothing startling or new in it.

It adhered to the recent general pattern of Nazi propaganda, mentioning final victory only once, again describing the war as being waged to defend Europe against the East and frequently employing such phrases as "ultimate success" and "preservation of our people."

"Mystery Story" London newspapers played the proclamation as almost a mystery story, pointing out that it was the second time within a month that Hitler failed to deliver an address personally. The other was issued October 18 when the people's army was called up for duty.

The latest proclamation, like its immediate predecessor, was aired over radio Berlin by Himmler, appearing before an audience in Munich. Himmler was introduced by Paul Giesler, the Munich gauleiter.

Hitler has not been heard publicly since last July 21, and when he failed to make his annual speech on the anniversary of the 1923 Munich beer hall putsch a flood of inquiry swept the German people.

Fuehrer "Busy" The repeated assurance in the proclamation that Hitler's work at headquarters will not permit him to speak still failed to explain why his voice has not been heard nor his face seen since the abortive attempt on his life in July.

Belief in London is that the proclamation read by Himmler was written by leaders of the Nazi party rather than by Hitler. The Daily Mail bluntly expressed the view that the proclamation may have been written "with a view to preparing the German people for the announcement of the death of the fuehrer."

The Daily Express quoted Emil Ludwig as saying that Hitler's death "may be announced any day now."

Even as the proclamation was being reported by the Nazi DNB Agency, the German radio was announcing another of Hitler's strange failures to appear at a public function. Radio Berlin reported that a wreath commemorating Nazi party members who died in the 1923 putsch was laid in Munich by Giesler "for the fuehrer."

RADIO ATLANTIC IMPLIES HITLER HAS FLED REICH

NEW YORK, Nov. 13—Radio Atlantic, clandestine anti-Nazi transmitter, noted today that the closing sentence of Adolf Hitler's proclamation, as read by Heinrich Himmler in Munich, contained these words:

"And so I greet you from far away through the speaker Heinrich Himmler." Radio Atlantic pointed out that the phrase "far away" is "certainly suspicious, to say the least," and went on to imply that Hitler possibly has fled Germany.

200 Yank Volunteers Earn Super-Commando Title In Greek Hills

ATHENS, GREECE (DELAYED)—More than 200 American officers, many of them of Greek parentage, have waged a "North-west Territory" war against the Germans for the last 16 months in the mountains of northern Greece. Though their identity must still be secret, these "cloak and dagger" boys tell some of the greatest stories of the war.

Every man a volunteer for tasks equaling those of the men of Bataan and Corregidor, these specially trained fighters killed Germans with everything from mortars to piano wire and blew up every type of Nazi installation from bridges to barracks.

One of these super-commandos, a 26-year-old captain from Waco, Texas, told a hair-raising story of 13 months in the central Grecian mountains where he directed a (Continued on Page Two)

BRITISH SCORE SIX-TON BOMB HITS ON TIRPITZ

LONDON, Nov. 13—British Royal Airforce Lancaster bombers attacked the German battleship Tirpitz in Tromsø Fjord, the air ministry announced today, revealing the latest blow struck against the powerful Nazi war-craft was carried out Sunday morning.

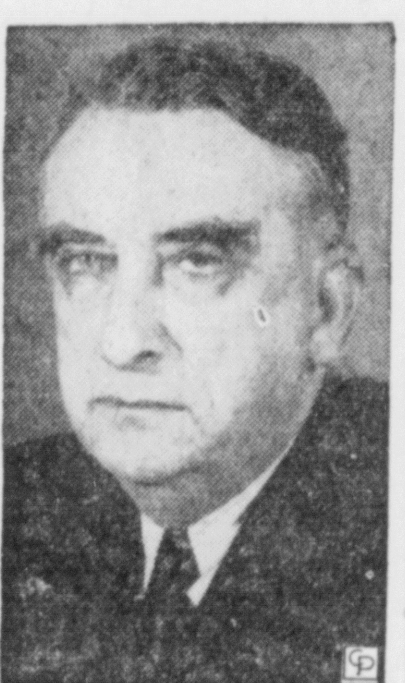

Direct hits were scored upon the Tirpitz with 12,000-pound bombs, according to the air ministry.

Fair weather prevailed during the raid, second within recent weeks on the huge battleship. Aircraft carrying out the attack landed away from their home airdrome, the air ministry asserted, adding that further details concerning the attack will be available as soon as examination of photographs is completed.

Mrs. Anna Rosenberg

MUCH speculation is being done now that President Roosevelt has returned to the White House for another four years, and the central figures of the changes that may come about are pictured here. Mr. Roosevelt plans an important post for his former mate, Henry A. Wallace, and some observers are suggesting the high-ranking secretary of state office in the light of Cordell Hull's recent illness. Early retirement of Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins is expected, and Mrs. Anna Rosenberg, New York Regional War Manpower director, is the suggested successor. Other talk has it that FDR will draw from the ranks of labor itself to fill the post, naming Daniel J. Tobin, Teamsters' president. Judge Fred M. Vinson is slated to take over the duties of his boss, War Mobilizer James F. Byrnes, who intends resigning January 1. Another change anticipated is the substitution of Democratic National Chairman Robert E. Hannegan for Postmaster General Frank C. Walker, who would like to return to his private business in New York City.

MILLIONS TAKE NAZI OATH TO FIGHT TO DEATH

LONDON, Nov. 13—Millions of men called up for the German people's army today were under oath to Adolf Hitler, pledging themselves to die rather than "abandon freedom and the future of my people."

The oath was administered to Volksturm members throughout the Reich, according to the Nazi overseas agency which reported that a segment of the people army paraded in Berlin and heard Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels proclaim that "almost the whole world has conspired to wipe the Reich off the map."

Goebbels, in addition, called on the German people to emulate their Japanese allies and prepare to struggle to their last breath if necessary in what he admitted is "the last round" of the war.

Germany will defend "every house and every street, wherever the enemy should succeed in penetrating," according to Nazi reports on the Goebbels speech as recorded by FCC. "Imbued with the same spirit as the heroic Japanese nation," said Goebbels, "we are getting ready for the last round of this war. We intend to win this last round, with our last breath if necessary."

The German Overseas Agency said that "millions of volksturm men" participated in the nationwide oath-taking; and quoted one part of the oath as follows:

"I swear to God this Holy oath I shall keep unconditional faith and obedience to the fuehrer of greater Germany, Adolf Hitler."

Volksturm ceremonies were held also in Munich and Danzig, with Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler, head of the volksturm forces, presiding at the Munich demonstration.

WISCONSIN GRID FATALITY RULED TO BE ACCIDENT

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 15—A ruling of accidental death was expected to be made today without the formality of an inquest in the case of 17-year-old Allen Shafer, University of Wisconsin quarterback, fatally injured in Saturday's game with Iowa.

Coroner Edward Fischer said he did not believe an inquest would be necessary, but said he would view motion pictures of the game before deciding definitely. Shafer collapsed after a pile-up on the field and died shortly afterward. Physicians said the cause of death might have been a blow on the chest, inducing a hemorrhage of the lungs, 15 or 20 minutes before the youth collapsed.

Shafer's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Shafer of Madison, asked President Clarence A. Dykstra of the university, not to let the occurrence interfere with Wisconsin's schedule for the remainder of the season. The Badgers are to play Michigan Saturday in Ann Arbor.

Presidential Secretary Stephen T. Early said that Davis had written a letter to the President on his 65th birthday, Aug. 29, when Davis was on leave getting a much-needed rest, that he would like to be relieved of his post at the President's convenience.

Third Army Advances To Within Five Miles Of Fortress Of Metz

EVACUATION NOT LIKELY

Russ Prepare For Entry Into Budapest—Gains Made In Leyte Fight

By International News Service Troops of the United States Third Army under Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., pushed to within five miles of Metz today, inching toward the great fortress city on the Moselle in a three-way pincer drive.

Determined Yank forces north of Metz and Nancy meanwhile restored their lines after beating off a strong German counter-attack in the Koenigsmaecher area below Thionville which had forced the Yanks back two miles.

American units swept into the Coin-Surselle area and the De Koecking forest against stubborn opposition and despite extremely bad winter weather. The Germans appeared to be withdrawing their outlying forces into Metz proper, but there were no signs of any plans to abandon the city.

Gunfire Increases

Enemy artillery resistance increased but there appeared to be some let-up in infantry opposition. The Germans blew up dams and canals throughout the battle area in an effort to impede the American advance.

An official German communique admitted American penetration of Thionville and described Metz as the "center of gravity" of all western front fighting.

Cavalry patrols screened the country three miles ahead of the United States 26th infantry division, while the latter punched into De Koecking forest, which lies three miles due east of Chateau Salins.

Snow, rain and overcast prevailed throughout the front, but the Americans continued to push ahead, scooping up 1,211 prisoners in the last 24 hours.

Fights Great Battle

For the last six days, in the woods and valleys east of Point-A-Mousson and along the Seille river, Gen. Patton's Army has fought a great battle. Over difficult terrain where slime sucked at every wheel and icy winds turned rain into sleet, his infantry in coordinated attacks with armor pushed the stubborn Germans back a total of 15 miles and has now begun to draw a steel noose around Metz.

The attack shows no sign of slackening. Japs in a northerly direction once again are drawing fire from Metz' ring of forts, strongly indicating the Germans intend to withstand a siege rather than yield Metz.

Gen. Patton already has denied the Germans use of all but one (Continued on Page Two)

JAPANESE KEEP UP REPORTS OF SHIP SINKINGS

NEW YORK, Nov. 13—Japanese imperial headquarters claimed today that an Allied battleship was sunk in Leyte gulf, in the Philippines, by a Nipponese suicide fighter-plane unit.

The Japanese Domei Agency meanwhile reported that a lone American B-29 bomber soared on Ise bay, in Central Japan, on a reconnaissance mission.

Neither of the enemy reports was confirmed by Allied sources. The Japanese communique said the Nipponese fighter craft carried out their alleged attack in Leyte Nov. 12 "with sure-hit-and-sure-death bodily crash-plunges and sank one enemy battleship and one transport."

Another warcraft was hit, according to the communique, which listed names of the fighter pilots participating. The Domei Agency, in reporting the Superfortress flight over the heavily industrialized Nagoya area on Ise bay, said the plane apparently was from an American base in the Marianas.

mainline railway and a couple of roads over which they might try to escape.

The weather has favored Adolf Hitler by holding American mechanized and armored columns to the roads, robbing them of elbow room, while rain has raised the Moselle and Seltz rivers to flood level.

The battle is being fought for complete mastery of the east bank of the Nied Franchis river, narrower and shallower than most in this area, but equally troublesome. The number of crossings made northeast of Chateau Salins already indicate that Patton again is winning hands down.

Airforce Grounded

The Allied air force has been able to offer only sporadic support due to zero visibility, but despite all their natural advantages, the Germans have been forced to retreat eastward from the Moselle after yielding such well-plotted strong-points that it now is apparent Hitler has ordered whatever sacrifices may be necessary provided only that his best soldiers are saved for the final battle.

Meanwhile, Soviet forces in Hungary were reported by Moscow to be preparing for an entry into beleaguered Budapest. Dispatches from the Hungarian front announced that Marshal Rodion Malinovsky had won a significant victory north of Czegled while Soviet artillery was pouring shells into the outer defenses of the capital.

The Germans and Hungarians were reported to have been routed along a 20-mile front in a battle along the approaches to the capital.

In the Pacific, American forces have made "good progress" in on Leyte island were reported to their drive against the reinforced Japanese garrison at Ormoc.

Japs Pushed Back

A communique from Gen. MacArthur's headquarters revealed the Americans had made a three-mile gain in their drive on Ormoc.

The U. S. 24th Infantry fighting north of Ormoc drove the Japs out of strategic high positions on Mount Cataboran which dominates the corridor into Ormoc from the north.

Other American forces, supported by armored units and heavy artillery fire, fought in important advances against the Japs on the road south of the village of Pinampogan. American forces were being deployed to form a giant pincer movement against the Japanese garrison in Ormoc.

Although the reinforced Jap garrison has made no attempt to break out of their restricted sector in the Ormoc area, they are putting up bitter resistance against the Americans.

American forces are being given support by the fighter-bombers of the Fifth Airforce who now are based on Leyte.

Good News for Head Cold Victims, New Vapor May Prevent Sniffles

By SAUL PETT
Central Press Correspondent
EVANSTON, Ill.—Add to the housing wonders you may expect after the war:

Homes in which the possibility of catching or spreading colds will be sharply reduced.

Schools, factories, buses, theaters and business offices where the dangers of catching an airborne disease will be less than ever before.

In short, a mechanical device, which, if used widely enough, may save the future from the spread of severe epidemics of common colds, influenza, pneumonia and other airborne diseases.

The first large scale evidence that such ailments can be curbed by conditioning the air with an invisible, antiseptic vapor, was revealed recently by two scientists at the Technological Institute of Northwestern University.

The men behind the development are Burgess Jennings, chairman of the department of mechanical engineering, and Dr. Edward Biggs, associate in medicine.

Their answer to the problem of curbing airborne disease both in homes and in places where large numbers of people gather is to spray a room with a vapor made from triethylene glycol, which is inexpensive and non-inflammable.

Jennings and Dr. Biggs studied the health of 2,000 servicemen in vapor-treated and untreated dormitories over a four-month period. These results were found:

1—The occurrence of airborne infections, especially colds, was reduced sharply from untreated dormitories.

2—The hemolytic streptococci in the throats of infected individuals were prevented from spreading by air to the throats of others.

3—A small epidemic of mumps was brought under control.

Jennings and Biggs, who have been working on the problem for several years, showed through experiments last year that the vapor distributed in a large room killed bacteria in the air.

First Real Proof

Their more recent work, however, was the first real proof that airborne infection among individuals could be reduced by the spread of the vapor.

The vapor cannot be detected by the layman either visually or through any odor. Converted from a liquid by a specially constructed vaporizer, it is distributed uniformly through the air by a duct and fan system. The air conditioning system, or one similar, is necessary to the device.

Aside from the air conditioning equipment—and post-war planners have told us no new home in America will be without it—the vaporizing process will be inexpensive.

To vaporize, for example, a large room holding 10,000 cubic feet of air, only about 15 drops of the glycol would be necessary every hour.

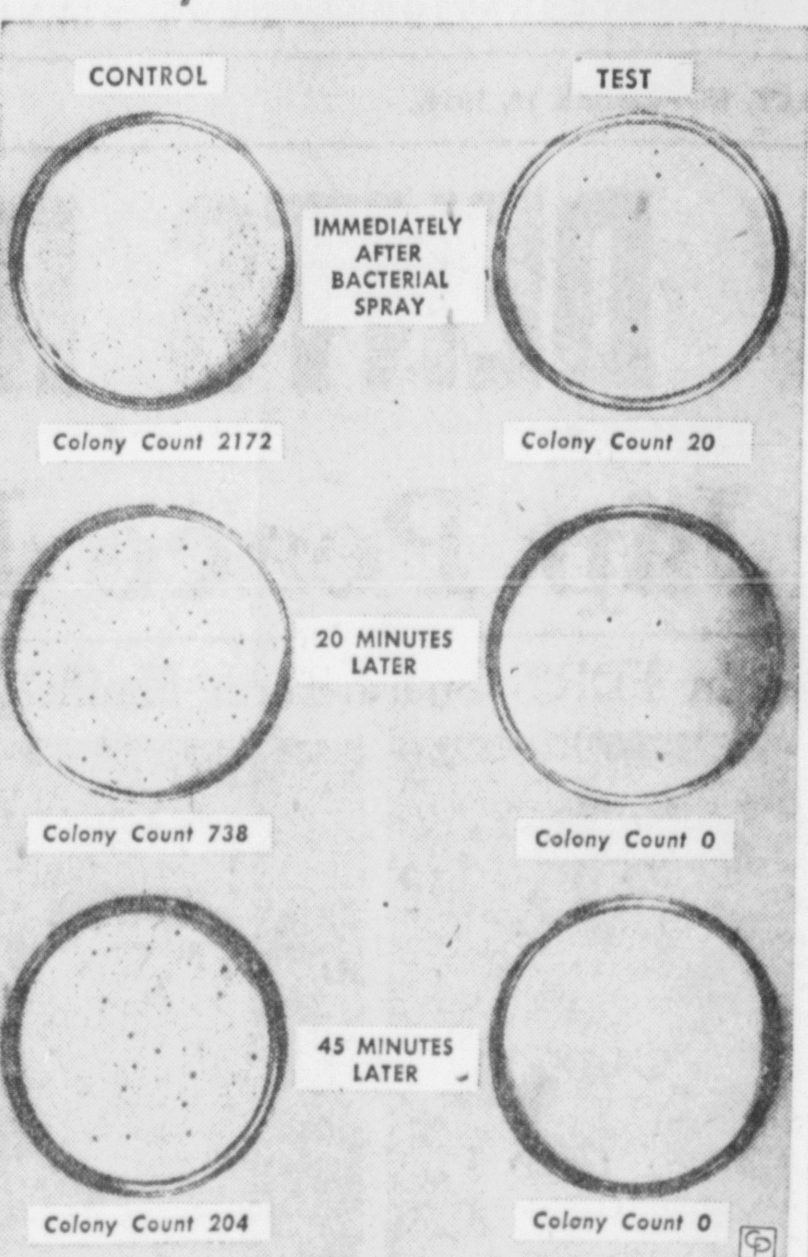

The volume and time extent of the vaporizing process could be adjusted by a thermostat, depending on how well the room is insulated and how great is the danger of airborne disease at the particular time.

The men under observation by Jennings and Dr. Biggs were divided into groups of 320, some housed in vapor-treated dormitories and others in untreated dormitories, and were studied for six-week periods.

They slept in the dormitories but were not confined to them during the day, thus exposing themselves to the normal number of possibilities of catching an airborne infection.

The experiments were conducted from January to last April. In one group, hemolytic streptococci were detected in the throats of 34 per cent of the servicemen. After six weeks in a vapor-treated dormitory, the number was reduced to 8 per cent.

In another group quartered in

untreated dormitories, the percentage of infected servicemen remained about the same as when they were first observed.

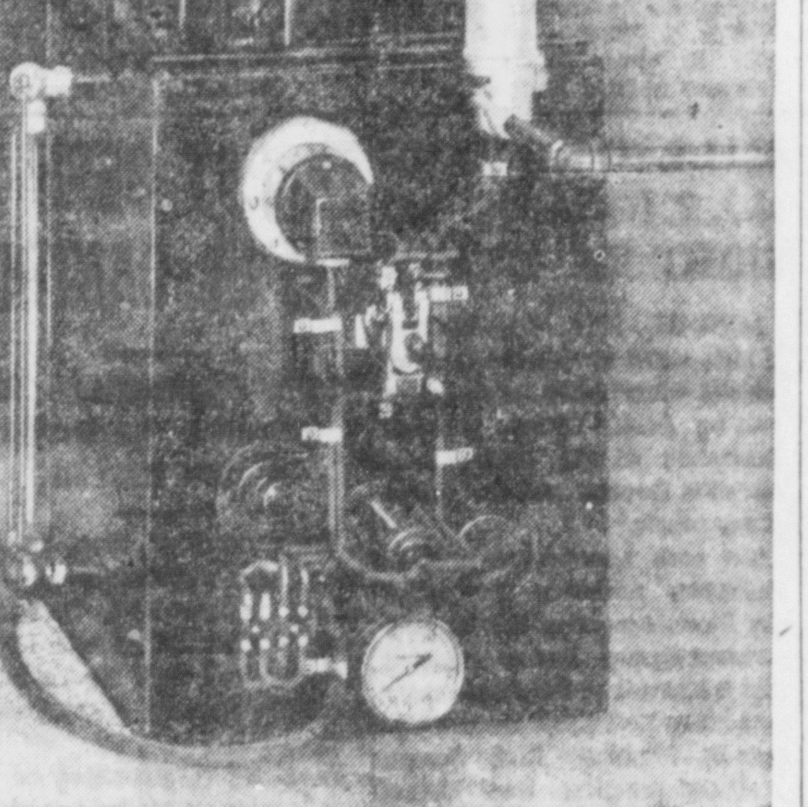

During the epidemic of mumps four times as many men caught the disease in the untreated dormitories as in the treated dormitories in the last half of a six-week period. The first half was not considered because of the possibility that the infected men caught the disease before living in the dormitories.

The vaporizing process is ready for general use, and the end of the war and release of necessary materials will make possible its general manufacture.

Jennings and Dr. Biggs pointed out: "The new evidence of the effectiveness of glycol vapor holds great promise that respiratory infections, ranging from common colds to influenza and responsible for a recorded annual loss of more than 100,000,000 man days in American industry, will be brought under greater control than ever before has been possible."

The two men estimated that Americans suffer from 400,000,000 colds a year.

Vapor-treated buildings, they say, will go a long way toward reducing that suffering.

tenants to achieve their ends. The subcommittee recommended that the United Nations take these steps:

1. Pool all information to get a complete picture of the German network of economic penetration.
2. Confiscate all German property in the United Nations, including the liberated nations and disvest Nazi cloaks and collaborators of their holdings and management powers.
3. Allied military commission should by decree assume ownership of all German stocks in so-called "neutral companies" and require neutral nations to turn over the management of these companies or otherwise give assurance that they have been completely purged of Nazi interest and control.

The subcommittee asserted that Hitler and his political henchmen will battle to the end to save their own skins and warned against any sort of negotiated peace with the manufacturers. A negotiated peace or surrender that would leave "this group of perennial conspirators" in power would fall short of victory and would lead once more to war, the report declared.

acting rumors of ill luck having befallen Hitler, asserted:

"Work at my headquarters does not permit me to leave it at the present, even for a few days. I consider my task today to consist not so much in delivering speeches as in preparing and carrying out those measures that are necessary to wage this war to its ultimate victorious conclusion."

The proclamation virtually "soft peddled" Germany's fight against the western Allies, asserting:

"As in every competitive fight, this struggle required supreme hitting power from every individual nation. But at times when all were involved in a fateful life-and-death struggle there was a great danger that the forces of this continent would be split up in the face of the threatening onslaught from the depth of the Asiatic East—that eternally latent threat to Europe." The reference was to Soviet Russia.

The London Daily Express noted, however, that the theme running through the proclamation could be summed up by what it termed, "four odd extracts," quoted as follows: "one, my life doesn't matter; two, so long as I'm alive; three, I shall not spare my life; and, four, as long as I have breath."

PACIFIC P. T. BOAT HERO GETS NEW DECORATION

NEW YORK, Nov. 13—Commander John D. Bulkeley, PT boat hero who received the Congressional Medal of honor for aiding in the rescue of Gen. Douglas MacArthur from Corregidor in 1942, today had a new decoration—the Legion of Merit.

The Third Naval District, announcing the award, cited Commander Bulkeley for participation in the invasion of France when he commanded torpedo boat squadrons operating off Normandy.

band of Greek guerrillas in making life miserable and military operations expensive for the invading Nazis.

This captain, a regular army man, explained that he volunteered for the operation group to be dropped into Greece when he was assigned as commanding officer of a laundry battalion.

"Many times I wished I was back at the old washboard," he said, "but now that its over I wouldn't trade the days with my Greeks for all the dough in the world."

The captain explained that he adopted old Indian fighting methods to modern weapons of warfare and "things panned out pretty well."

"We had a wonderful diet of goat's cheese, black bread and a Greek wine. Our missions were somewhat informal and always very noisy because we had to scare hell out of the Germans first, then shoot things up, then run for home as fast as we could get there."

The biggest "show" which the Texas captain directed took place only a few days before the Germans finally pulled their troops from the Corinth isthmus.

"The Jerries had about 500 men in a small town preparing bridges and railroad demolitions," the captain related. "We had about 120 men, including several British commandos who were a lot more experienced in this type of work than us. We had a long argument about attacking the Germans, but finally decided it had to be done."

"We decided on an encircling attack at midnight with only a half moon for light. The encirclement gave us about one man every 50 or 60 yards—which is pretty thin. We rounded up every Greek kid in the area who could beat a tin can or just yell loud."

"At midnight, the kids began raising all kinds of racket and we began shooting. The Germans were completely disorganized. After about 45 minutes fighting, we had killed 165 of them, captured 122 while losing only two men killed and 13 wounded."

AGED DRUGGIST SHUNS DANGER, WHIPS BURGLAR

CHICAGO, Nov. 13—Eighty-two-year-old George V. Haering, a Chicago druggist for 46 years explained today why in spite of his great age he fought and routed an intruder attempting to burglarize his home.

"Well, I'm pretty old and I'm going to die before very long, anyway," he said, "so I thought I might as well put up a fight."

Before the burglar escaped, Haering hurled a jar of strawberry jam which struck the man in the jaw. Some time later police found in a tavern a man with a big lump on a well-bruised jaw. He gave the name of Norman Pinchard, 24, and was identified by the druggist, police said he admitted the robbery attempt.

BAD NEWS!

ALONG with all the good news of victories abroad, comes some very bad news here at home. Fat salvage collections are TAKING A NOSE DIVE in many sections of the country.

That can mean just one thing! Too many of us are letting the good news GO TO OUR HEADS. Too many believe that, with the collapse of Germany, we can relax.

Don't these people know that the battle of Germany is just one chapter in this global war—and that we still have a long, tough road to travel in the East?

Even the TOTAL DEFEAT OF GERMANY can't help us one bit as far as the fat situation is concerned. And for a specific reason: IT'S THE JAPS WHO HAVE OUR FATS.

Our fat shortage troubles began when Japan moved into the Pacific areas and cut us off from ONE BILLION POUNDS of fats and oils we used to import every year. The Japs are still there—and we're still cut off!

So we must continue saving used fats to help make up that loss. To help make the munitions, synthetic rubber, medicines, soaps and other materials needed to finish the war. WE MUST SAVE EVEN HARDER THAN EVER. So let's get busy and send the fat collections climbing up all across America! THE NEED IS SO URGENT, our government gives you 4¢ and 2 free red points for every pound saved!

So KEEP SAVING USED FATS UNTIL V-J DAY—the day when we can celebrate final victory over our last and toughest enemy—Japan.

BUCKS PREPARE TO STOP YOUNG

Regulars Rest For Illinois Game As Pitt Panthers Are Trounced 54-19

COLUMBUS, Nov. 13 — With a 54-19 victory over hapless Pittsburgh as their latest achievement, Ohio State's undefeated, untied footballers went into a huddle with Coach Carroll C. Widdoes today to determine ways and means of stopping twice-beaten Illinois in Cleveland Saturday in a round robin series which will virtually determine the 1944 Western Conference champion.

The series got underway last week at Ann Arbor as Michigan punched out a 14-0 win over the Illini. And Saturday's Ohio State-Illinois game in Cleveland will continue the series with the completion coming two weeks hence when Michigan comes to Columbus for the Bucks' annual homecoming game.

But Coach Widdoes and his Buckeye board of strategy looked ahead only as far as Illinois today as a blistering week-end of practice began.

"Stop Young" was the cry in the Buck locker room and the best way to do that Coach Widdoes told newsmen last night is to "tackle that guy."

Meanwhile, reports from the Illini camp indicated that both Buddy Young and Eddie Bray may miss the Cleveland game as a result of injuries incurred in Saturday's rough Michigan battle. According to Coach Ray Eliot both are on the hospital list and Young may be lost for the remainder of the season.

However, Coach Widdoes wasn't fooled the least bit by these reports and went ahead mapping a defense to stop the Illini's lightning-shod backfield.

Ohio's first string outfit—Les Horvath et al.—played less than nine minutes against Pittsburgh Saturday. They rolled three touchdowns across the Panther goal in a little more than eight minutes and immediately gave way to second and third stringers who played out the rest of the 60 minutes.

And while All-American Candidate Horvath and the rest of the first stringers set out most of the game, a flock of second and third team backfield men—namely Gene Janeko, of Campbell; Tony Stranges, of St. Clairsville; Bob Dove, of Ashland—approached stardom.

Janeko, a 156-pound scatback, caught one touchdown pass, snared another aerial to setup a second score and averaged nearly five yards per try in eight rushing attempts. Dove was equally brilliant—his passing was well above average, his punting superb and his running a pleasant surprise for Coach Widdoes. Stranges scored one touchdown on a 30-yard pass from Quarterback Tom Keane, of Bellaire.

And Keane, who has been on the verge of stardom all season, really registered to perfection for the

MUSICAL STATEMENT

SENATOR and Vice-President-Elect Harry S. Truman apparently has been hiding his light under a bushel. Or in less scriptural terms, hiding his music under his hat. His talent in this field was made known on election night in his hotel, when returns suggested that his Missouri might go Republican. "Wow!" he exclaimed. "I think this calls for a concert."

So he promptly applied the remedy, amazing his listening friends and visitors with what was described as "a professional-like rendition" of Paderewski's Minuet, which requires some delicacy of execution. The listeners were described as sitting spellbound. As the performer finished, amid applause, he made this rather cryptic comment: "Gentlemen, I wish I had stayed with music—(pause)—along with politics."

That looks like hedging. But surely there is an idea in it. Frank critics have often observed that Congress needs something. Usually it has been roughly assumed that the missing requirement is simply brains. But this doesn't necessarily cover the case. Miracles might happen if Congress were provided with less talk and more music.

GERMANY AFTER THE WAR

POST-WAR Germany will have one great handicap that did not exist after World War I. Then, when the Kaiser and his men dropped the reins of government, an opposition party, the Socialists, was ready to take over. Though the Socialists had supported the war, they did not start it, and were not in sympathy with Prussian militarism. They failed later, but at least they were there to make a beginning.

Today nearly all possible candidates for succession to the Nazi leadership have been killed or put in concentration camps, an experience likely to unfit anybody for future work of any kind. The execution of Karl Goerdeler, the ex-mayor of Leipzig and a former Nazi state official, followed that of the Nazi generals who conspired against Hitler.

The general Nazi policy has been to lop off the leaders in any field outside their own inner circle. That is one reason why, even if the Nazis had been cleared out of the way, the future of Germany would still look so dark.

GERMANS ARE WEAKER

GERMANS do not have the stamina of Americans. Major Robert Mansfield, an army surgeon from Louisville, Ky., now serving in France, has learned from his hospital experience that Germans stand pain less well than Americans, have less resistance to infections, and die more easily of wounds.

"Deficiency in diet may explain it,"

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

OFFERS FDR SUPPORT

WASHINGTON—One of the hitherto secret incidents of the late political campaign was an offer by General MacArthur to support the President for a fourth term.

The conversation took place at Pearl Harbor when Roosevelt held his conference with Admiral Nimitz and MacArthur. After the naval officers had left, the General and the President had a private conference of their own.

Prior to this, the President was certainly not enthusiastic about MacArthur and, judging from the critical letters made public by Congressman Miller of Nebraska, the feeling was mutual. But at this meeting, FDR later told friends, but would hardly melt in MacArthur's mouth. He dripped cordiality and friendship, actually offered to make a statement supporting the President for re-election.

FDR in turn was so impressed with MacArthur's strategy plan for landing on Leyte and retaking the Philippines that he later expounded on the subject at some length to those who accompanied him on the trip.

"A great strategist," the President told Admiral Leahy.

The President also proposed, following the MacArthur conference, that he send a message to Congress urging that MacArthur be made "General of the Armies." This is the title now held by General John J. Pershing, long retired but still accorded the rank. Republicans in Congress, the President thought, would be glad to pass the necessary legislation giving MacArthur this title.

Admiral Leahy, however, strongly advised against it. He told the President that people would immediately accuse him of playing politics.

The President, however, continued to be enthusiastic about MacArthur's strategy plan for retaking the Philippines, and supported Doug to the hilt when the plan later was reviewed by the Joint Chiefs of Staff in Washington. They argued against it, wanted to land on the coast of China instead of the Philippines. However, the President, as Commander in Chief, threw his weight to MacArthur, and the plan went through.

SOLVES SERVANT PROBLEM

Oklahoma's Indian lawyer, Roy St. Lewis, has been having servant trouble. Roy lives in Maryland on the only Western-type ranch anywhere near Washington. But despite the Western atmosphere, he couldn't get servants to stay. They didn't appreciate it.

In the Hoover Administration, Ray was Assistant Attorney General. He remains an ardent Republican, doesn't like Roosevelt and makes no secret of it. Or rather, he didn't.

But Roy has a new wife, the former Peggy Hammond Taylor, who has been on friendly terms with Mrs. Roosevelt and once had her picture taken with Mrs. Roosevelt at some social function.

Finally, with his servant troubles at their peak, Roy remarked to Mrs. St. Lewis:

"The trouble with us is that we sit around damning Roosevelt. Maybe that's why we can't keep any servants. Now you (Continued on Page Eight)

DIET AND HEALTH

Safety In Childbirth

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

AMONG THE signs of advance in medicine one that has gone almost unnoticed is the decreasing death rate of mothers in childbirth. It has been a slow progress due to many factors, but the latest spurt in improvement is probably due to the introduction of the sulfa drugs in puerperal sepsis, or childbed fever. In 1942, 29 states had a maternal death rate of less than 2½ per 1,000 live births. In 1936 no state in the Union had so low a rate, the best rates were about 4 per 1,000 live births.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

It was 100 years ago that the first attempts to influence the mortality and deliberately attempt to save women's lives in the period of childbirth were begun. Before that it was considered that what happened to a mother was an act of Providence. No human agency could influence it and it was impious to try. In 1843 a young doctor 34 years old named Oliver Wendell Holmes read a paper before the Boston Society of Medical Improvement, in which he suggested that the fever of which young mothers died shortly after childbirth was contagious and furthermore that it was spread from patient to patient by the attending doctors and nurses.

Fever Proved Contagious
This, remember, was long before the days when germs were known and identified, long before such things as antiseptics. Long before Lister had shown the way to make surgery aseptic. Young Dr. Holmes had to prove his points by inference—by reciting cases in which a doctor who had been attending a woman who had childbed fever had attended another woman in childbirth and had contaminated her. Naturally his statements aroused a furor of resentment among the medical profession. Medical men were not as receptive to new ideas then as now. But gradually with the accumulation of evidence came acceptance, especially after the Viennese obstetrician, Semmelweis, showed that by dipping the hands in chlorinated lime solution the doctor rendered himself fairly safe to attend a mother in labor. With the introduction of surgical gloves, sterilized instruments, rubber gowns, etc., the obstetrician prepares himself as carefully for his duties as the surgeon does for an abdominal or other operation.

Regular Examination
An additional safeguard to the mother is the growth of the practice of careful examination and care during the entire expectant period. This has been a slow process of education, but it has borne fruit and few women in North America would think of allowing a pregnancy to go to term without regular medical consultation. The use of the X-ray and pelvic measurements and blood pressure measurements has served to prepare the doctor if there is any deviation from normal present.

The results of these discoveries and campaigns is shown in the statistics which I have quoted. The worst mortality is found in the Southern States among the negro population who do not employ a doctor at all. The statistics are everywhere made worse by the inclusion of families who for economic or other reasons do not take advantage of the opportunities of prenatal care and of doctors or midwives who observe aseptic precautions during delivery. The mother who is intelligent in her selection of an obstetrician may be assured nowadays that her delivery will be far safer than the act of crossing the street at some of our busy corners.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

Nicky practically invited suspicion, and so did his twin sister, Alexia. She was young, beautiful, married to a man she finally declared she had never loved and that man was the father of a man to whom she had been all but engaged and for whom, apparently, she still cherished what appeared to be far from a purely stepmotherly regard. I thought of her kneeling beside Craig, and the things she had said.

"You knew—you always knew I never loved Conrad." And then, "all that is ended now for us both, my darling." Craig hadn't exactly said, "Oh, isn't that fine, hurrah, my father's dead and you are free!" Still, he hadn't said, "Don't be a fool, Alexia," or even loved it.

Yet there was no real evidence against either Nicky or Alexia. Nor, as to that, against Peter Huber. Maud Chivery, Maud had all but run the household during the long years of Conrad's widowhood; it would not have been unnatural for her to feel a kind of jealousy for her young supplanter, Alexia. But Maud fairly exuded an almost belligerent respectability which did not go with the secret, horribly urgent emotion that finds its only relief in murder.

So I went on to Peter Huber. He had appeared on the scene almost as soon as I had. He had fumbled around about the telephone call to the doctor; he had run straight upstairs at the sound of something falling and had disappeared. And while he was no relation and so couldn't profit directly by Conrad Brent's death (as all of the others might conceivably do, even the Chiverys) he might have a motive if he were in love with Alexia. Yet certainly no man is going to murder a woman's husband without making sure that he's going to get the woman and (if I had eyes in my head) it wasn't Peter Alexia wanted; it was Craig, and Craig knew it. Besides, Peter Huber was only a friend happening to be there as an innocent bystander does happen to be on the spot.

Dr. Claud Chivery remained. He had prescribed the medicine which might have some as yet unsuspected significance; and somewhere in the history of that long friendship between the Chiverys and the Brents might lie seeds for murder. But again there was no evidence.

It had grown dusk as I stood there, although the sky was still light, so I realized later that, on the little ridge, I was silhouetted from below against the clear gray light of a lemon-colored star came out above the eastern hills. It was colder, too, so I pulled my cape more tightly around me and pulled the hood over my head. And it was just then that I heard somebody running heavily across the meadow toward me.

Something buzzed sharply through the dusk over my head; I heard that before the crack of the shot. I fell upon my hands and knees behind the stone wall just as both sounds came again. Whoever was running there in the meadow reached the rock wall a few feet away and began to scramble over it. Just then another shot whizzed lower, over my head and the stone wall. And I knew that the scrambling figure was at least thirty feet from me, but that the shots came from somewhere in the darkening, irregular meadow below, possibly from the wooded valley which seemed to outline the bed of a small stream.

Whoever crawled over the stone wall had ducked; at least no figure emerged from the shadow of rock and shrubs. Suddenly a small automobile whirled around the bend in the road and began to climb the little ridge, its lights streaming ahead. I crept out, running low in the shelter of the rock wall and into those welcome lights and stopped the car.

It was Dr. Chivery. He leaned out to look at me incredulously as, keeping the car between me and the dusky meadow, I approached.

"Somebody's shooting at me! From the meadow!" Another figure loomed up from the shelter of the wall and it was the maid Anna. Her braids had slipped over one ear, giving her a rakish air which almost belied the terror in her eyes. She gasped, "Doctor—please, sir—somebody's shooting—in the meadow!"

Neither Dr. Chivery nor I spoke; in the little glow from the dash-light his chin retreated still further and his slightly popped eyes seemed to take on a kind of reflection of the terror in the maid's face.

Then Anna caught a long, rasping breath and said, still panting, "I mean—shooting rabbits, I suppose, sir. I—I was walking in the meadow, when I—I heard someone in the brush along—along the brook. It—it frightened me. I—I ran . . ." Her eyes shifted to me and back to the doctor. "And just then—as I got to the wall—the shots began." She paused again, then said, "Doctor, would you mind taking me to the house? I—I'm late. Bebeens . . ."

Without a word Dr. Chivery reached back, swung open the door to the rear seat, and I got in and so did Anna. Still silent, he turned and started back for the Brent place. He took us to the house, up the winding drive to the front door, where he deposited us. I thanked him and he drove off with, it seemed to me, that queer reflection of terror still in his eyes. Anna hurried to open the door for me. She had caught her breath and straightened the blonde braids around her head.

"Who was in the meadow, Anna?"

"I don't know, Miss." So I let her go.

But she knew as well as I did that our hunter wasn't shooting at rabbits. It was too dark to have taken a good potshot at anything smaller than a horse—or a human, silhouetted against the gray sky.

I glanced in the morning room where Nicky was reading. His back was toward me but his small head and vividly checked coat were unmistakable. However I felt about him, it couldn't have been Nicky shooting at rabbits or at me. Nobody else was around and I went to my room, took off my cape, and again cast my mind back over the few things I knew of the murder of Conrad Brent. After a while I had to give up; if those shots had been intended to remove me and at the same time any clue in my possession, I didn't know what that clue was.

I didn't go in to see Drue for, a little belatedly, I bethought myself of my patient and the fact that he had been presumably alone, with Dr. Chivery dashing about the roads in his little car and Anna fleeing from bullets in the meadow. On the way to his room I stopped and took the trooper on guard in the hall which had happened.

So I went on to Craig's room where I found Peter Huber with him, both talking of Chivery. "Who does he think did it?" asked Peter as I entered the room and Craig looked at me, said "Hello, Miss Keate," and replied to Peter. "He says he doesn't know. He says it had to be somebody that knew about the lights. How much to give and how. He says you've got to give enough to cause a heart block, as it does, right away. If you give too little there are all kinds of symptoms of poisoning—nausea and convulsions—and—but that isn't what happened."

Craig took a quick breath and went on hurriedly, "Claud has been looking it up in his reference book. He frowned. 'He says he doesn't know who did it. But . . .'" "But what, Craig?" "Oh. Nothing. . . ." He paused again, frowned into space and said, "If only I could get up and about! If I could even find out who it was that gave me this. . . ." His fingers touched the bandage on his temple. "I didn't see anybody—I didn't even hear anything. . . . Look, Peter, scout around a little, will you? Find out, if you can, exactly who was up and about last midnight or shortly before. Find out what happened at dinner. . . ."

"Nothing happened at dinner," said Peter. "I was there."

A touch of exasperation crossed Craig's face.

"You'd better go now, Mr. Huber," I suggested, eyeing the tinge of scarlet that was coming up in Craig's lean cheeks.

"Wait, not yet, Nurse," said Craig quickly. "Listen, Peter, keep your eyes open and tell me if you see anything out of the way. And—and another thing," Craig hesitated, shot me an oblique glance and said, "Look through the house and see if you can find some yellow gloves. Loose—biggie. Don't let anybody know and if you find them, bring them here."

Peter nodded "Okay." And then I sent him away. But Craig said no more of the mysterious yellow gloves and, still aware of his condition, I didn't ask further questions.

RED CROSS ON JOB

NEW YORK—If there's a job to be done, the Red Cross will find a way to do it. A Red Cross member noticed that service men sleeping in Travelers' Aid lounges at railroad terminals often shivered with cold. Red Cross needlework volunteers set to work and made 20 afghans for each of the stations.

"The Authority on Authorities"

NEEDED MORE LATER ON

AMONG ALL the times when the partner of the opening leader should refuse to cover an honor played on the trick from the dummy, the most important is clearly recognizable. It is when using your own honor early would build up in the dummy an entry which could be employed later by the declarer for the vital purpose of bringing in the established cards of a long suit.

West opened his fourth-best spade 3, on which the 10 was played from the dummy, the Q from East and the A by the declarer. The club suit was attacked, the 10 being led, East holding up the A, and then the 9, which East also under-played, and finally the 2 to the K, which East took with the A. But his holding up had done no good. For, no matter what he returned, the dummy could be reached with the spade 7 to the J, in order to cash two more clubs. Hence, South scored four tricks in clubs, plus three in spades and one each with the red aces.

East could have beaten that contract by merely holding up his spade Q on the first trick. That would have let the declarer win it cheaply with the dummy's 10. But it would have put East in position to prevent a vital late entry to the dummy after the clubs got set up. By doing that, he could have held South to two tricks in clubs, instead of four, and would have made it impossible for South to find ways to score a total of nine tricks.

Spectacular Progress
Due Soon in Pacific
Reduction of Jap Navy
Is Definitely Assured

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Look for new and spectacular developments in the Pacific war in the coming winter months. Unlike the Japs at Pearl Harbor, who were unprepared for success in their strike at our "sitting duck" Navy, the United States war command can be counted on to exploit to the fullest possible extent the reduction of the Japanese imperial navy as a fighting force.

Telling blows against Jap-held territory and against the home islands themselves are "in the mill"—possibly on the brink of actuality at this writing. Oddly enough, however, the very great degree of success against the Japs in the Far Pacific theater is a factor in restricting new operations against the enemy.

The removal—at least temporarily—of the Jap naval threat from Philippine waters has permitted much larger shipments of men and material to MacArthur's Central Philippines invasion than had been originally hoped for. This accounts for the rapidity with which the Japs are being cleaned out of Leyte and Samar islands.

But, it has also had the effect of absorbing much of the available war materials which had been built up at advance bases throughout the Pacific over months of time, and is creating a temporary shortage of war instruments and men for new thrusts which are being contemplated.

For this reason, it may be expected that operations in the coming months will be confined largely to air attacks against strategic Jap industrial centers and military and naval strong points. The blows will be struck by both land-based and carrier-based planes, but any quick move into Formosa or the China coast is discounted by informed war observers.

REPORTS ARE GOING THE ROUNDS in labor circles that the AFL will reconsider its earlier refusal to participate in the World Trades Union congress and will send representatives to the meeting, which is to be held in London next January.

The AFL initially refused to take part because of the scheduled presence of Russian delegates at the meeting. The AFL holds that the Russian unions could not be considered free organizations of workers.

Russian representatives recently appealed to the AFL to participate. As a result, the issue may be threshed out at the AFL convention in New Orleans on Nov. 20.

The CIO long ago announced its intention to take part in the meeting.

SENATOR EDWIN C. JOHNSON (D., of Colorado) thinks those who are debating the proposed world security organization are over-complicating the method of forming it and over-simplifying the job which it will face.

He suggests a method by which the world security organization would recruit and equip its own army, air force and navy, on a voluntary basis. It would be a sort of foreign legion.

This arrangement, he insists, would be less complicated than some other proposals.

At the same time, he said, the organization's task is being over-simplified in public discussion. Johnson believes years will be required before the organization will be in a position to deal with acts of aggression.

REPORTS REACHING the commerce department indicate that Germany is becoming more and more desperate in her effort to find necessary substitute materials to all vital needs.

Examples given are experiments to determine whether potato stalks can be used as a textile raw material, and the use of straw as well as reeds that grow on river banks as sources of viscose cellulose for the manufacture of rayon.

Hats for Varying Moods

IN tune with fashion notions which have decided to soften the starkest mantling toward more feminine effects, hats dedicated to the coat and skirt ensemble also are softer. A typical version is sketched, left. Below, we see a handsome and flattering model of the romantic persuasion . . . the other aggressive trend in new millinery.

The tiny brimmed hat, pitched forward, is black velvet; ostrich plumes are black, except for the brow draper, which is bright candy pink.

ARMY ELEVEN IS RATED GREATEST EVER ASSEMBLED

NEW YORK, Nov. 13—The Army football team today is bearing its greatest burden—a mountain of applause heaped on its shoulders for its feat in handling Notre Dame's gridmen their worst defeat in 57 years of South Bend pigskin history.

By now all the superlatives have been exhausted in the innumerable accounts of Army's 59 to 0 lashing of the Irish last Saturday, but one fact remains clear and undisputed: we, in 1944, are looking at the greatest Army team ever assembled. Even Coach Earl Blaik, who said before the game that Army would be satisfied with a one-point triumph, was as stunned and speechless as any of the 75,000 fans who thronged Yankee stadium for one of sports' greater annual spectacles.

Coherency was at a premium at the stadium but uproar was gen-

CANTON ELEVEN RANKED SECOND IN WEEKLY POLL

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 13—Canton McKinley, pre-season favorite to grab off the 1944 mythical Ohio high school football championship, was within a step of its goal today after administering a decisive 24-14 defeat to previously unbeaten Lakewood.

An International News Service poll among Buckeye scribes to determine the state's 10 leading schoolboy eleven placed the once-beaten Bulldogs in second place behind undefeated, untied Cleveland Cathedral Latin.

Latin clung to its first place billing for the seventh straight week in the wake of a record breaking 104-6 decision over feeble Cleveland Central. The score, second biggest in Cleveland scholastic grid annals, was the eighth in a row for the Lions.

Oddly enough, though, there was a sour note in that lopsided victory for Latin. The six points which Central managed to collect represented the first touchdown to cross the Latin goal this year.

Lakewood, in losing to McKinley, sacrificed its second place ranking and dropped all the way to fourth place. Columbus North cut down Bexley, 27-6, and advanced to third place.

MARTHA RAYE GUEST

Musical modulation, both sweet and shriek, will be heard from the mouth of Martha Raye Tuesday when she becomes the guest of Dick Haymes and Helen Forrest on "Everything for the Boys." One of the first entertainers to embark on an overseas tour, she will also renew her acquaintance with GI's in foreign parts when she joins Haymes and Forrest in the program's weekly shortwave conversation with two American lads at an Allied base on fighting soil. To the accompaniment of Gordon Jenkins and his 31 piece orchestra, the trio will also join in a musical salute to the servicemen convalescing at the Woodrow Wilson General Hospital at Staunton, Virginia.

CAIN'S STORY FEATURED

James M. Cain, noted author of "The Postman Always Rings Twice," has said, "This Is My Best," concerning his story, "Career in C-Major," the hardboiled tale of a would-be singer, which is dramatized on the novel series, Tuesday, "Career in C-Major" poses two careers against each other, a wife's ambition to be an opera star (although her voice is a joke) and a husband's talent for song which he did not know he had.

RUTHERFORD, MENJOU STAR

Debonair Adolphe Menjou and lovely Ann Rutherford are the latest in a long list of movie celebrities to let down their hair and realize their secret ambitions on Milton Berle's "Let Yourself Go" fun session. They will appear as guests on the program Tuesday. Together with Kay Armen, popular radio vocalist,

REPEATS REQUEST

Following an avalanche of requests for a repeat rendition of "My Christmas Song for You," Georgia Carroll, lovely songstress of Kay Kyser's "College of Musical Knowledge," will sing the number again when the Ol' Professor takes his gang to the army base at Camp Rosecrans, near Oceanside, Calif., for the broadcast Wednesday.

John Baker, the Metropolitan Opera tenor, starred on "Steel Horizons" Sunday nights, claims that when this season is over he will hold the record for having sung duets with more new singers than any other network artist. Each week the program spotlights a different "singing Cinderella" selected from cities all over the country via local auditions. And the program format calls for Baker to sing at least one duet with each.

If Bob Burns can clear cast members of his Thursday night radio show from previous commitments he will originate his Nov. 23 broadcast from Chicago on behalf of the U. S. Navy's War Loan Exhibit. However, the date is still tentative, with Burns now trying his best to make definite arrangements.

"David Harding—Counterspy" is going to investigate that man Dunninger! "Harding," better known as Don McLaughlin, star of the Monday series, will be a guest judge on the Master Mentalist's Nov. 22 program.

Bob Hawk of "Thanks to the Yanks" is back from Weatherford, Oklahoma, where he fulfilled two ambitions of long standing. When he addressed members of the Southwestern Oklahoma Educational Association at their annual convention, he not only discussed subjects in which he has a keen interest—such as radio's influence on the cultural advancement of students—he also had the opportunity of shaking hands with ex-classmates and friends he

Plans for Memorial Lake Financing To Be Meeting Subject

ASSOCIATION MEET SET FOR TUESDAY NIGHT

State Said To Be Ready To Start Work On Assurance Of County Cash

Plans for the launching of a drive for the Pickaway county memorial state lake will be made at a special meeting of the Pickaway Farmers' and Sportsmen's association Tuesday evening in Franklin Inn.

Attempts will be made to set up an organization to control future activities of the project. Louis Mebs, chairman of the special lake committee of the Sportsmen group, announced Monday the state conservation department is ready to start on the project just as soon as officials are assured the county will raise its share of funds necessary to build the lake.

Farmers' and Sportsmen's association has sponsored preliminary work on the project and has secured the aid of the conservation department which has appropriated $50,000 toward constructing a lake. Now that the lake is assured if enough money can be raised in the county to bear the rest of the expenses, a commission will be named to control the project.

This board of control or commission probably will include five members. An advisory committee may be set up to supplement work of the commission.

The commission will be set up so that contributions received by it can be deducted from income taxes of the donors. Tom A. Renick, legal advisor of the sportsmen's association, is drafting by-laws for commission.

The lake, to be constructed in the Devil's Back Bone area, is planned as a memorial to Pickaway county's men and women in service. Present plans call for a large park area around the lake to make the site a recreation center for all residents of the county.

U. S. invasion of the Philippines and Allied naval and air activity in the western Pacific may force the Japanese to seek a partly overland route in bringing supplies from the rich Netherlands Indies to the Nipponese homelands. Such a route, from the Indies to Canton, China, by sea, from Canton to Mukden by rail, must await the closing of the gap in the Kweilin area, shown on map.

FINE FISH PUT INTO POND AT COUNTY HOME

Residents of the Pickaway county home and the children's home Monday were eagerly awaiting a chance to catch some of the large stock of fish which now reside in the pond near the homes.

Crappies, bluegills, bullheads and bass were among the 650 fish placed in the pond Saturday. They were sent here from Kent, Ohio, by the Ohio conservation department. The crappies and bullheads weighed about a pound and a half each while the bluegills and bass were smaller.

The fish were obtained by the underprivileged children's committee of Kiwanis club. Other shipments will be sent here in the future.

Quite a crowd was present to watch the delivery of the fish, which came here in a tank truck from the fishery.

Fishing at the pond is restricted to residents of the two homes.

SENATE GROUP FOR "HARD PEACE"

Senators Kilgore of West Virginia and Elbert Thomas of Utah could have published it before election, but decided to wait for a minority Republican okay before letting out a dynamite-laden report recommending a "hard peace" for Germany. Their findings, in general, support the Morgenthau plan and warn against the danger of German remobilization for another war. The report will be published very soon.

Prepared by a special Military Affairs sub-committee, it shows that, for 30 years, German economy has been carefully geared for war. Immediately after the last war, the powerful metallurgical and chemical trusts were built up as a base for the munitions industries.

The Kilgore committee will recommend the following:

(1) Punishment not only of war leaders but of German cartel leaders;

(2) The complete outlawing of international cartels;

(3) Immediate creation of an international economic and social council provided for in the Dumbarton Oaks agreement. This is necessary, according to the Kilgore committee, in order to prevent reviving the international cartel system.

"It is generally agreed," the report will say, "that the German armament industry must be liquidated, but there has been much confusion in the public discussion as to the extent German industry as a whole should be liquidated."

"The subcommittee believes that those who have urged that all industry other than direct armament manufacture be left intact have overlooked the fact that, for more than 30 years, all of German industry has been closely integrated in a munitions economy . . .

"Final agreement cannot be reached immediately on the disposition of the remaining industries which are suitable to a balanced peacetime economy but are also convertible to war purposes. Discussion may bring out various general alternatives, but definitive action by the international organization will depend on factors which are still imponderable. These factors include (1) the extent of German industry still intact after final military victory; (2) the internal political balance after punishment of war criminals; and (3) the number and influence of Germans who can be relied upon to operate German industry solely for peace production."

Sign of a good housekeeper!

SURE, there's a cobweb on that door. In a moment it will be gone with a flick of the duster. But right now, it's a sign of good housekeeping, for it shows that an unused bedroom has been closed off to save heat.

There's going to be some shortage of coal delivered to homes this winter. This isn't because less coal is being produced. More coal is being mined this year than last. Mine owners and miners alike are doing a splendid job. And there are ample rail facilities for transporting coal.

But certain grades and sizes of coal are needed for war production. And, in addition, your local coal dealer is suffering from a shortage of manpower, trucks and tires. So be patient with him and make the coal you get go as far as possible.

Be sure your heating system is clean and in good shape. Fire carefully. Pull your shades and draw the drapes at night. Close off unused bedrooms. For other suggestions see your coal dealer.

One of the biggest jobs of the C&O Lines is hauling coal from the mines along its routes, so we're in a position to understand the problem and to know how essential coal is these days.
